13. ABSTRACT (Maximum 200 Words) This Core provides the Program Project investigators with oversight and coordination of the scientific, administrative, fiscal, and regulatory aspects of their individual projects. During the initial period of funding, the Core Director has been individual projects. During the initial period of funding, the Core Director has been responsible for organizing regular monthly meetings with Principal Investigators and ad hoc meetings with members of the Internal Steering Committee. The date of the 1 st joint meeting of the Program Project investigators, members of the Internal Steering Committee and of the External Advisory Board has been finalized and will take place on November 13-14, 2-3. The Core has assisted investigators with periodic gathering and maintenance of IRB, Animal Care and Radiation Safety approvals, monthly reports of expenditures, documentation of scientific productivity including publication of 8 manuscripts and new grant submissions (2 new grant proposals), as well as preparation of the current Progress Report. A time-consuming but important responsibility of the Core has also been that of organizing several presentation by invited speakers on a number of cutting-edge, scientific and technological, topics related to ovarian epithelial cancer. Finally, a change in leadership of Project #3 (co-PI to PI) is anticipated beginning Year 02 secondary to a shift of this project's PI to more diagnostically-oriented activities.

Introduction

The main function of the Administration Core is that of facilitating the realization of the cumulative vision of the Program Project Director and Principal Investigators. During the initial period of funding, the Core has performed all administrative tasks required for a successful program and has provided the investigators with highly experienced internal and external advice and with a functional structure fostering intra-programmatic scientific interaction. The Core has also fostered a scholarly and scientific-rich environment by organizing several Grand Rounds and lectures and by developing graduate and post-graduate programs in ovarian pathobiology.

Body

Since receipt of first year funding (September 2002), the Administration Core has provided scientific leadership as well as administrative and financial oversight for all components of this Program Project. The Core continues to evaluate progress and stimulate interaction among all investigators and has periodically provided oversight in issues of regulatory nature including IRB, Animal Care, Radiation Safety and Human Subject Protection. Regular monthly meetings of Program Project investigators have been held and dealt with various issues including administration, budget and up-to-date research reports. In addition, weekly research meetings have taken place within individual laboratories. A cadre of outstanding speakers has been invited to deliver cutting-edge lectures on scientific and methodological topics dealing with ovarian cancer or related issues (Table 1). One of such lectures has been the Annual George Wilbanks Lecture in Gynecologic Oncology given by Dr. Thomas Hamilton of the Fox Chase Cancer Center on the very timely topic of a newly developed Mouse Model of Ovarian Epithelial Cancer. While ad hoc meetings with members of the Internal Steering Committee have taken place so far, the first joint meeting of the Program Project's Internal Steering Committee and the External Scientific Advisory Board has been finalized for November 13-14, 2003 (see Appendices). A multidisciplinary graduate course on the Pathobiology of Human Cancer has been developed with the interactive participation, among other faculty members, of all Program Project Investigators. Finally, the productivity of the Program Project investigators has been significant with 2 submitted grant proposals on Akt2 Oncogenesis (Cheng-NIH) and Telomerase-Apoptosis in Ovarian Cancer (Kruk-DOD), 8 manuscripts and 11 presentations at national meetings.

Other Administration Core Activities

The Administration Core Director has negotiated with the University of South Florida College of Medicine and the Moffitt Cancer Center the future joint recruitment of a basic scientist with experience in developmental molecular biology, including morphogenesis, as it relates to ovarian epithelial oncogenesis. Such a recruitment will expand and complement the existing expertise (Akt, telomerase/survivin, IGF1-R/ascorbyl stearate, vitamin D/RXR, angiogenesis) within our Ovarian Epithelial Cancer Pathobiology Program

Dr. James Fiorica, Leader of the Gynecologic Oncology Program at the Moffitt Cancer Center Has recently recruited Dr. John Mark Lancaster from Duke University. Dr. Lancaster is a young clinical investigator with expertise in ovarian cancer genetics and genomics. He has previously collaborated with Dr. Andrew Berchuck, a well-known investigator of ovarian cancer biology. Dr. Lancaster brings translational expertise to the Gynecologic Oncology and Ovarian Epithelial Cancer Pathobiology Programs (see Appendices). Collaboration with Dr. Lancaster has already begun in the area of gene expression in early ovarian epithelial cancer. Significantly, Dr. Lancaster brings to the Program a database of over 130 well-characterized ovarian cancer specimens and 2 informative microarray gene lists.

Other Administrative Issues

The Program Project and Administrative Core Director, Dr. Nicosia, has recently notified the DOD Contracting/Grants Officer that Dr. Domenico Coppola, Principal Investigator in Project #3 of the above funded Program Project has accepted a position of Medical Director in a diagnostic pathology laboratory in Tampa effective August 1, 2003 (see Appendices). He will continue to be a member of the Ovarian Epithelial Cancer Pathobiology Program in the Department of Pathology at the University of South Florida College of Medicine at the rank of Associate Professor, Affiliate Faculty. He will continue to have access to research laboratory space (Program project Director, Dr. Nicosia, and Project #1 P.I., Dr. Cheng), technical personnel and core facilities as well participate in periodical laboratory research meetings. Therefore, his total involvement in the above project will be by necessity diminished.

After serious consideration, the Core Administration believes that the best course of action is to have Dr. Jin Cheng, already a Co-PI in this project, and Dr. Santo Nicosia to become PI and co-PI, respectively, in Project # 3 of DAMD17-02-1-0670. This project has a heavy emphasis on Akt-related mechanisms of action and Dr. Cheng is a recognized expert in this area. Likewise, the project has significant biological and animal components and Dr. Nicosia has a long and documented track record of expertise in both areas. Drs. Cheng and Nicosia have a history of successful collaboration and will see that all Tasks of project #3 will be successfully carried out, with the assistance of the listed technical personnel and the scientific advice of Dr. Coppola who will remain involved in the project as a co-PI without salary.

Conclusions

Since receipt of initial funding, the Administration Core has executed the goals stated in the original Program Project proposal by providing administrative and fiscal oversight and ensuring compliance of investigators and staff in regulatory issues. Success has been achieved in scientific productivity, including accepted manuscripts and new grant submission, and in scholarly activities related to ovarian cancer pathobiology, including a series of outstanding seminars and a newly developed graduate course. Finally, negotiations with local institutions have resulted in the approval of recruiting plans for a new ovarian cancer-oriented basic scientist and a faculty with expertise in translational ovarian cancer research has recently joined the institution. Such administrative efforts are essential to the continued success of our Ovarian Epithelial Cancer Pathobiology Program whose investigators are collectively striving to unravel the mechanisms of ovarian epithelial oncogenesis.

Dear Commander:

This is to notify that Dr. Domenico Coppola, Principal Investigator in Project #3 of the above funded Program Project has accepted a position of Medical Director in a diagnostic pathology laboratory in Tampa effective August 1, 2003. He will continue to be a member of the Ovarian Epithelial Cancer Pathobiology Program in the Department of Pathology at the University of South Florida College of Medicine at the rank of Associate Professor, Affiliate Faculty. Although he will continue to have access to research laboratory space (mine and Project #1 P.I., Dr. Cheng), technical personnel and core facilities as well participate in periodical laboratory research meetings, his total involvement in the above project will diminish.

After serious consideration, I believe that the best course of action is to have Dr. Jin Cheng, already a co-PI in this project, and myself to become PI and co-PI, respectively, in Project # 3 of DAMD17-02-1-0670. This project has a heavy emphasis on Akt-related mechanisms of action and Dr. Cheng is a recognized expert in this area. Likewise, the project has significant biological and animal components and I have a long and credible track record of expertise in both areas. Dr. Cheng and I will see that all project #3 Tasks will be carried out with the assistance of the listed technical personnel and the scientific advice of Dr. Coppola who will remain involved in the project as a co-PI without salary.

I trust that you will approve the requested reassignment of personnel and funds. Such an intervention will ensure unabated continuation of the proposed work. The present request is being incorporated into our 1st annual report of DAMD17-02-1-0670 due August 7, 2003.
